Cliburn Contest Earns City Worldwide Notice

MUSIC CRITIC PRAISES FORT WORTH

All in all, however, the Cliburn was the Washington Post critic's last word on the pianist's world tour, and his praise was unreserved. He wrote: "The young man who will sit at the piano in a few weeks will be a man of vast musical potential, and the promise of his future is as bright as the sun."

The Cliburn Competition was held in Fort Worth, Texas, on October 17-27, 1979. The event was held in the Bass Performance Hall, which was named after its principal benefactor, the late Bass B. Crosby.

The Cliburn Competition was established in 1962 by the late Marjorie E. Reynolds, who was a Fort Worth native. The competition is one of the most prestigious in the world and has launched the careers of numerous world-class pianists.

The Cliburn Competition is held every two years and is open to pianists from all over the world. The competition is judged by a panel of esteemed pianists and musicians, and the winners receive significant cash prizes and opportunities to perform internationally.

The competition is named after the late Van Cliburn, who was a world-renowned pianist and the first American to win the International Tchaikovsky Competition in 1958.

The Cliburn Competition is known for its high standards and for rewarding new talent. The competition also features a variety of events, including masterclasses, lectures, and concerts, which are open to the public.

The Cliburn Competition is held in Fort Worth, Texas, and is hosted by the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra. The competition is a significant event for the city, and it draws performers and audiences from around the world.

The Cliburn Competition is one of the most respected competitions in the world, and it has a long history of success. It is a testament to the talent and dedication of the pianists who participate in the competition, and it is a celebration of the power of music to bring people together.

The Cliburn Competition is an event that is not to be missed. It is a unique opportunity to witness the rising stars of the classical music world, and it is a testament to the enduring power of music to inspire and move us all.